SUBJECT: Address of the Vice President of the United States, the Honorable Richard Nixon

1. The Vice President, the Honorable Richard Nixon, at the Ninth Agency Orientation Course, on 10 February 1953 presented an address on the current world situation.

2. The Vice President pointed out that he was presenting his subject from a Congressional point of view, and as representing Congressional opinion. His address should not, therefore, be interpreted in its entirety as representing current national policy.

3. Some of the subjects on which the Vice President commented are, of course, controversial, but it is believed that his speech and his point of view will be of universal interest throughout the Agency.
